

I do have to say that I feel sorry for the telemarketers that call because I know that it helps the economy when as many people as possible have a job. However, in my life time I have seen where the telemarketers have gotten more aggressive. If I say I don't want solicitors calling, I mean it. They call all times of the night and they are very aggressive to the point where you have to get down right rude in order to deal with them. This should be our choice as Americans to have the right to not have people calling us unless we give them our number to call. Please protect that right. Thanks!
